Henry Dowling, MD
Host

Dr. Christina Parks received her PhD in Cellular and Molecular Biology from the University of Michigan in 1999. She did her graduate research in the field of cytokine signalling. Cytokines are the chemicals that the immune system uses to communicate. Thus Dr. Parks brings a wealth of knowledge about the molecular mechanisms by which pharmaceuticals may be causing injury to vulnerable immune systems.

Dr. Mumper attended the Medical College of Virginia and did residency training at the University of Massachusetts and the University of Virginia, where she served as Chief Resident of Pediatrics at UVA. She is currently on the faculty of MAPS (Medical Academy for Pediatric Special Needs) and is certified by the Institute of Functional Medicine where she developed the first advanced clinical training in pediatrics for the organization.

Dr. Henry Dowling specialises in family-based medical care with a focus on internal medicine, pediatrics, pre-natal care and geriatrics. He opened Bermuda's first integrated health practice, Associates in Integrated Health (AIH), which provides rehabilitation, nutritional support, holistic pain management and counselling services.
